“My horn is not medicine,” _____ .

Did You Know?

Humans are often considered the world’s most deadly creatures due to their significant impact on the environment, other species and each other. Rhinos are one of the many species around the world that are critically endangered due to poaching and habitat loss. Rhinos are poached by humans primarily for their horns, which are highly valued in some cultures. For example, in parts of Asia, rhino horns are believed to have medicinal properties, even though there is no scientific evidence to support this.
