The children were captivated by the wonders of the rainforest in their lofty treehouse school.

Did You Know?

JJ Durand is conservationist, who is on a mission to educate children about the importance of the Amazon rainforest. From the lofty heights of his treehouse school, JJ is determined that his students learn how to safeguard the Amazon and its incredible plant and animal species. Built 32 metres up, in the rainforest canopy, JJ's treehouse school is one of the few places in the Amazon rainforest that has Wi-Fi.
